"BAD LITTLE BONI."

"Bad little Boni." That's what the relatives of Count Boni de Castellane husband of Anna Gould, call him, affectionately. He is also described that way by people who do not feel any great affection for him. Boni is scheming desperately to retain his hold on at least a fragment of his wife's millions. He has dispersed something like half of her large fortune during the ten years of her married life and it is but natural that the little French scapegrace should want to continue spending indefinitely.

The countess is reported to be willing to settle something on him in order to be rid of him once and for all. She is also so forbearing that, in the divorce proceedings that are under way, she will not accuse him of anything like all the crimes she might with truth, charge him with. That is a way many women have, and it is a way that passes the understanding of men.

For several years the countess has been a most unhappy woman, if reports from Paris are true. Her husband has let her know very plainly that he married her for her money alone and he has paid marked attention to other women. She bore it all patiently until his doings became so notorious that she could not, for the sake of her own self respect, refrain from legal proceedings. The tragic feature of the case is that the divorce will be no punishment to Boni. Especially will this be true if any money is given to the odoriferous little chap.

His standing in French society will be just as high as it ever was and he will have just as good a time. If it is possible for souls that have passed to another world to view the doings in this one, and if Jay Gould is in the hell that his enemies consigned him to, his view of the dissolute Castellane's lavish expenditure of the money he wrung from his victims in Wall street will take his mind off his torments for at least a brief period.

Superfine Sarcasm.

The bright paragraphists overlooked a jolt. When hostilities ceased between Russia and Japan, Field Marshal Oyama sent a message of congratulations to General Linevitch, in whose breast all hope had fled excepting flight, returned his congratulations. The question is hardly debatable, whether Oyama was congratulating Linevitch over escaping a licking, or congratulating the country over the prospects of peace. Linevitch's congratulations sound very much like Pat Murphy's explanation about a sorely discolored optic he wore; it was in morning for Mike Dolan's fist.

Assessment Notice

Prudential Investment and Security Company—Location of principal place of business, Carson City, State of Nevada.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the third day of January, 1906, an assessment (No. 1) of ten ($10) dollars per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States Gold coin, to the Secretary of the corporation, at the office of the Company in the County Building, on Carson street, in the State of Nevada, or at its executive office, Rooms 740-742 of the James Flood Building, 970 Market street, in the city and county of San Francisco, State of California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on Saturday, the 17th day of February, 1906, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Wednesday, the seventh day of March, 1906, to pay the delinquent assessment together with the costs of advertising and expense of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

CHARLES WILSON,

Secretary

Offices—County Building, Carson St., Carson City, Nevada, and Rooms 740-742 James Flood Building, 970 Market Street, San Francisco, California.

Proposals for Meats
